MEDICAL EXAMINATION INSTRUCTIONS

Every applicant for an immigrant or fiancee visa is are required to undergo a medical examination by a physician authorized by the Embassy. The applicant may also require immunizations before a visa can be issued. Applicants must contact the physicians directly to arrange an appointment. All examination and immunization fees are the responsibility of the applicant.

Applicants from Cambodia may choose to undergo examination in Bangkok or Phnom Penh. There are advantages and disadvantages to both choices. Examination in Phnom Penh is probably more convenient for most applicants. Although Bumrungrad Hospital in Bangkok has a few staff members who can speak Khmer, applicants who do not speak English or Thai themselves, or who will not be accompanied to the examination by an interpreter, are best advised to obtain their examinations in Phnom Penh. In addition, certain conditions (for example, tuberculosis and venereal disease) must be treated for a period of time before a visa can be issued; most applicants will probably prefer to wait at home. On the other hand, if problems with the medical reports are identified at the time of interview, they will probably be more easily and quickly solved in Bangkok, where the doctors are close by and available for consultation.

The following physicians are authorized to conduct medical examination of visa applicants. The fees listed below are for medical examination only. Immunizations may require the payment of an additional fee. Applicants should bring the attached forms, their passport, and three (1 x 1 1/2 inches) photographs of themselves, and records of any major illnesses or immunization to the medical examination.
