ASEAN VOICES WEBSITE LAUNCHES

MARCH 15, 2010

<http://aseanvoices.org/>

This month President Obama of the United States is coming to Indonesia, ASEAN's largest country and home to the ASEAN Secretariat. This will be his second visit to the ten-nation ASEAN region -- our region -- in less than a year!

To share information about this historic visit and to help strengthen ASEAN identity, a new site, aseanvoices.org, has been launched. It aims to encourage citizens of ASEAN countries to share their views on how the U.S. and ASEAN can work together for the betterment of our region and the world.

ASEAN visitors to the site can write letters to President Obama expressing their opinions on the following subjects: education, the environment, economic development, internet freedom, and interfaith relations. Those who don't post letters can still participate by commenting on and voting for the best letters written by their fellow ASEAN citizens.

DON'T MISS OUT! WIN FREE AIRPLANE TICKETS

Writers of the best letters in each of the five categories will win free airplane tickets to Hanoi, host of the 16th ASEAN Summit this April 8-9, or other exciting ASEAN destinations, compliments of AirAsia.

Even if you don't send a letter, you can comment and vote here for the best letters written by your fellow ASEAN citizens.

So, what are you waiting for? Write your letter to President Obama. Help get ASEAN's voice heard!
